COLON CANCER
SCREENING TODAY.

Colon cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death in the United States – and it doesn't have to be! Each year about 154,000 new cases of colon cancer are found and 52,000 result in death. The main reason the death rate remains so high is that not enough people are screened. The sad paradox of colon cancer is that it is often preventable but not prevented. Colon cancer screening tests – such as Colonoscopy – can find cancers and precancerous growths early enough to cure the disease or prevent it.
